Nashville American. A new inquiry is to be made by the Collector of Vital Statistics for the next census in this district which may e tribute something toward the solution of an old problem, writes a Washington correspondent. Health Officer Townsend has required the medical officers of the city to furnish all information possible as to the mortality of people of mixed bloot, mulatoes, quadroous, and to take a distinct classification of those persons in the census. There has been in some quarters some talk as to the creation of such a new classification. This hitherto-has been true as to some of the Southern States. But the people who are not generally classed in the census as colored "make the very distinction on their own account." The mulatoes and quadraous quite generally do not have social relations with very dark negroes. So much is this the case that there is one of the most prominent "colored" church or ganizations here which is known as the "white colored church." It may be doubted whether a black negro could obtain the colored church. tain a seat in there. The people of mixed blood constitute almost a caste. They look almost with contempt upon the genuine African, and are much cha-grined when any of their children show recurring family traits and are as black as, for instance the father or mother of the person of mixed blood may have

Favetteville Observer A writer in a late issue of that excellen paper, the New York Star, contribute an interesting letter from Albany, N. Y in which, among other quaint customs that beautiful city, is mentioned that of ringing the curiew at 9 o'clock every night in the year-a custom, the writer

This is a time-honored usage in Fayette ville—the evening tattoo for our fathers and grandfathers before us, but its origin was doubtless different from that which inaugurated the custom in the bustling city on the Hudson. In olden times itringing was the signal by which the slave, absent from home for any cause. was notified that "the pat-er-ol would cotch him" after that hour, and the remaining population sensibly concluding that it was a fit time for white as well as-colored "houses folks" to be in bed, adopted this quaint curiew for the proper regulation of all good households. May the custom endure throughout the life of the dear old town?

An official return has been issued, giving information concerning the railways of the United Kingdom for the years from 1854 to 1888.
